

UNDERREPRESENTED TOP 10:

Notes: Seem to have more working class populations (except for Hannover, which is a large city)

1. 50259 → Pulheim, Germany: main industry = power plants
2. 52134 → Herzogenrath, Germany: main industry = coal mines
3. 53332 → Bornheim, Germany (agricultural industry: famous for white asparagus apparently?)
4. 52249 → Rothgen b. Eschweiler, Germany (quote from wiki: Eschweiler (or Weisweiler) isn't too remarkable with industries. Chemicals and goods are the main products, while it also has a lignite-powered power plant rated at 2.8 GW)
5. 30419 → Hannover, Germany
6. 47877 → Willich, Germany (smallish town)
7. 41836 → Hückelhoven, Germany (smallish town)
8. 50321 → Brühl (Rhineland), Germany (smallish town, but does have an amusement park that probably generates revenue)
9. 53639 → Königswinter, Germany (smallish town, but does have seasonal tourist attractions)
10. 41334 → Nettetal, Germany (smallish town)

OVERREPRESENTED TOP 10:

Notes: all (except 04720) are big urban centers with multiple industries and probably higher incomes

1. 80769: Munich, Germany
2. 50676: Cologne, Germany
3. 60326: Frankfurt, Germany
4. 20099: Hamburg, Germany
5. 44137: Dortmund, Germany
6. 04275: Leipzig, Germany
7. 22085: Hamburg, Germany
8. 10179: Berlin, Germany
9. 04720: Mochau, Germany → Not sure about the demographics of this one, seems like a small town
10. 70191: Stuttgart, Germany → HQ for a couple luxury car manufacturers
